MCBW recognizes prostitution as a system of violence against women and children.

*Cases of family or friends murdered in domestic violence-related situations.

In Minnesota in 2011

The Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women (MCBW) tracks all homicides that result from domestic violence involving a current or former intimate partner. This includes the death of the intimate partner but also the deaths of new partners, family members or children that arise out of domestic violence involving the current or former intimate partner. While information on all of the domestic violence homicides is included in the report, we want to pay special attention to battered women murdered by intimate partners, as these cases account for the majority of murders of women in the United States and in Minnesota. Of the 30 adults killed in 2011 due to domestic violence, 23 were women killed by a current or former intimate partner.

When we use the terms battering and domestic violence, we are referring to the pattern of violent behaviors used by men that affects the quality of life for all women. It encompasses both physical and sexual violence and includes the pervasive emotional abuse and threats. Social norms that persist today allow men to control their partner's access to finances, transportation and use children to manipulate their partners, doing harm to children in the process. While these same dynamics are also present in same sex relationships and on rare occasions women use similar tactics against their male partners, it is the broader social institutions that support this pervasive and historically sanctioned pattern of behavior that MCBW seeks to change.

In reporting the total number of deaths, it is important to note that at least this many women and children have been murdered. We cannot be certain we have not missed some deaths since we must use a method of data collection that primarily relies on news accounts. No state or federal agency collects comprehensive data on domestic homicides. In addition, the murders of women and children of color, Native American women and children, immigrant and refugee women and children, women and children living in poverty, rural women, lesbian/gay/bisexual/transgender people, and women and children used in prostitution and sex trafficking may be underreported in our listing as they frequently go unreported in mainstream media.

At least 23 women

Were murdered in cases where the suspected, alleged, or convicted perpetrator was a current or former husband, boyfriend, or intimate partner.

At least 4 children under the age of 18

Were murdered in cases where the suspected, alleged, or convicted perpetrator was the father, mother, or guardian of the child, or the perpetrator was the parent's spouse or intimate partner.

At least 6 friends, family members or interveners

Were murdered in domestic violence-related situations.

At least 1 man

Was murdered in a case where the suspected, alleged, or convicted perpetrator was a current or former intimate partner.

At least 11 minor children

Were left motherless due to their mothers' domestic violence murders. Seven of these young children were present when their mother was killed or they discovered the body.

Red Flags for Batterer Lethality

In this report we pay special attention to battered women murdered by intimate partners, as the majority of women murdered in the United States and in Minnesota are murdered by their current or former intimate partners. Various tools to assess for high risk or potential lethality have been developed based on research of women killed by their intimate partners. It is impossible to predict with certainty which batterers will become lethal to their victims. All batterers should be viewed as potentially lethal, though there are well-documented indicators of lethality of which everyone should be aware. Included in the factors that have been identified as possible lethality indicators are: separation, extended history of domestic violence or other violence, pregnancy, threats or fantasies of homicide or suicide, access to a firearm, threats to use a weapon, stalking, attempted strangulation, forced sex, extreme jealousy and control of daily activities.

We look at the homicide cases in Minnesota and see whether information was known regarding key lethality factors. In assessing for lethality factors, MCBW relies almost entirely on media reports of the homicides. MCBW specifically focuses on four lethality factors: the victim's attempts to leave the abuser, previous threats to kill the victim, perpetrator access to firearms, and perpetrator history of violence. MCBW has been looking at these four lethality factors since 2006. For the past six years, these lethality factors were present in a significant number of cases. We would expect that a more complete analysis of public records and interviews with friends and family of the victims would yield further information on other cases and further information on the other red flags.

There were 23 women murdered in Minnesota in 2011 by a current or former intimate partner.

Victim's Attempts to Leave the Abuse: While conventional wisdom persists that leaving an abuser will always make a battered woman safer, separation often increases the risks of further harm, as batterers "step up" their efforts to control or intimidate the victim. In 2011, 48% of the intimate partner femicides occurred after the woman had left the relationship or when she was attempting to leave. This statistic has been consistently around or over 50% for the past few years (48-67%) and supports the national studies indicating that one of the most dangerous times for battered women can be when they leave, or attempt to leave, the batterer.

Dawn Anderson of Park Rapids was separated from her husband. She had obtained an order for protection barring her estranged husband, Greg Anderson, from the residence. He was living in a treatment half-way house and was under court ordered probation supervision for criminal charges. Despite separating and taking legal action to keep Greg Anderson away, he came to her house on March 22nd and shot and killed her.

Threats to Kill the Victim: Threats by the abuser to kill the victim are among the most reliable indicators of lethality and are the most often overlooked by the criminal and civil justice systems. A review of the media reports of the 2011 murders does not reveal much information about threats to kill. What we do know is that at least 61% of the victims had experienced prior abuse or the perpetrator had a prior history of involvement with the legal system.

Cynthia Hickman had a long history of being abused by her husband, Henry Hickman. She had sought an order for protection weeks before her death. In her order for protection petition she wrote of waking up next to her photograph with a knife over it. She had also voiced her fears to a friend saying that her husband might kill her. These fears were realized when she was beaten to death by Henry Hickman on February 26th.

Access to Firearms: In 2011, 12 of 23 (52%) intimate partner femicides were committed with firearms. While the percentage of femicides using firearms fluctuates year to year, murder with firearms is the most frequent weapon of choice, supporting the studies showing that possession of firearms can increase the risk of lethality. In 11 of the 12 gunshot cases, the perpetrator then killed himself. 5 of the 6 family members, friends, and interveners were killed by gunshot.

Jamie Velasquez shot and killed Cintia Bustos and their live-in babysitter, Angela Gonzalez. Jamie Velasquez then shot and killed himself. All three of these shootings were witnessed by the couple's 3-year old son.

Challenge to Minnesota Communities

Domestic violence and domestic homicide have a devastating effect on every person living in Minnesota. Each of the victims whose story is told here was someone's daughter, son, mother, father, sister, brother, family member, intimate partner, friend, neighbor, or co-worker. An abusive relationship that ends in the murder of the victim illustrates the failure of our systems and society to respond effectively to the needs of battered women and their children.

We pledge to remember the women, children, men, family members, and friends who die each year from domestic violence, as well as the women and children used in prostitution and sex trafficking, who are also battered women and children in need of protection from abuse.

In 1989, MCBW began keeping track of the domestic violence homicides in Minnesota. Over the past 22 years, at least 774 people have been killed in domestic violence incidents. That is an average of 35 people every year. This is an unacceptable number. While many improvements have been made in how we address domestic violence, we have impacted the number of people dying. The number of people killed each year will not change dramatically until the full community becomes involved.

Our challenge to the community is to not let these deaths go unnoticed, to not expect to have people killed each year from domestic violence. Our challenge to the community is that each person take up the challenge to get involved, to do their part to promote safe and healthy relationships, to promote violence prevention and to support early and effective intervention efforts.

Recommendations for the Community

For more than thirty years, Minnesota has been a leader in the work to end domestic violence. Minnesota had one of the first shelters in the country for battered women. Minnesota put out the coordinated community response model for intervention in domestic violence courses – referred to internationally as “The Duluth Model”. In recent years, Minnesota created the “Blueprint for Safety: An Interagency Response to Domestic Violence Crimes” which is being tested and adapted around the country. Many of the lead scholars and organizers in the field are Minnesotans. We have been and can continue to be leaders in the work to end violence. To reach the next level in ending violence, the community must become actively engaged in the work. Every person can, and should be, part of the solution to end violence and to make each Minnesota community a truly vital community.

Get Involved: Domestic violence is a pervasive problem that is woven into our societal fabric. The solutions needed to end violence need to be as equally diverse and complex as the problem. Each person has different skills and resources to bring to the solution. Participation can range from showing up at an education event, discussing safe and healthy relationship with a youth, volunteering for a local domestic violence agency. There are many opportunities for involvement but the first step is to see domestic violence as an issue that concerns each and every one of us.

Promote Prevention: No one should have to experience domestic violence. It is critical to stem the incidents of domestic violence by creating an environment where everyone knows that violence will not be tolerated and where healthy, respectful and violence-free relationships are the norm for everyone. In order for that to happen, we must promote prevention efforts. Prevention efforts need to focus not only on providing information and skills to individuals but need to engage families, communities, as well as organizations and policy makers. Prevention efforts need to encompass the full spectrum of people from the very youngest to the oldest members of our communities.

Support Intervention: While prevention is critical to ending violence, it is essential that we continue to support early and effective intervention when there is domestic violence. There has been much work done creating and improving our interventions. These interventions often focus on the legal system but also include medical systems, educational systems and social services systems. All of these interventions are important. We must continue to support these efforts and to support the ongoing work of early and effective intervention.

Safety is the Priority:

Safety must be a priority. When talking about healthy relationships, when considering criminal or family court policies, when making funding decisions, the starting point needs to be safety. All too often, important decisions are made and policies are enacted that provide for an “opt out” or other special considerations for domestic violence—relegating safety to an afterthought and not a priority. When mistakes are made, people can and do lose their lives. The stakes are too high for us to get it wrong. We must prioritize safety.

If we as a state do not step forward and take on the issue of domestic violence, we will continue to report deaths every year. We must get all of our community involved, we must invest in prevention, we must support intervention. If we fail to keep safety as a top priority, women and children will continue to be killed.

We cannot afford to compromise on safety.

Women murdered in cases where the suspected, alleged, or convicted perpetrator was a current or former husband, boyfriend, or intimate partner.

Krissy Bates Age 45 Minneapolis January 10, 2011	Krissy Bates was strangled and killed by her boyfriend, Arnold Waukazo. Arnold strangled Krissy at her apartment in Minneapolis. When her body moved, he then stabbed her four times in the torso and one time to the left side of her neck and broke her ribs. Arnold was convicted of second-degree murder and sentenced to 367 months in prison.
Leila Kim Scott Age 44 St. Paul January 21, 2011	Leila Scott was beaten and killed by Michael Sherman. Michael beat her in the head and neck with a baseball bat. The evidence indicates that he had wanted sex for money and a dispute arose concerning the money. He was convicted of unintentional second-degree murder and sentenced to 12 1/2 years in prison.
Katherine Marie Pohjonen Age 19 Vadnais Heights January 25, 2011	Katherine Pohjonen was murdered by her husband, Kalen Pohjonen. Katherine was shot by Kalen who then shot and killed himself. Investigators were called to their home in Vadnais Heights after a colleague of Katherine's reported she had not shown up for work. Investigators looked in a window and saw the couple unmoving inside. The Ramsey County medical examiner ruled in a preliminary report that Katherine was shot with a handgun by Kalen. The handgun was found at the scene.
Nicole Marie Meier Age 26 Blaine	Nicole Meier was shot and killed by her former boyfriend, Jesse Oakley. Nicole ended her relationship with Jesse in the summer of 2010. When she moved out of the townhouse the two shared in Circle Pines, she asked for police protection. Nicole was trying to collect back rent that Oakley owed. She indicated at the time to co-workers that she was afraid to meet Oakley at his home. When she did not come to work the next day, her co-workers called 911. The authorities found Meier dead from gunshot wounds at the townhouse. They also found the body of Oakley and concluded that he killed her and then himself. Oakley also had a documented history of violence against his ex-wife, including stalking. Oakley's ex-wife had received a protective order against him that was to expire in March 2011. He had violated the order in December. The police found notes in

February 1, 2011	Oakley's home indicating that he was "obsessed" with both his ex-wife and Nicole. The protective order required him to give up his guns. The police found two 9-millimeter handguns in his home when they found Nicole.
Rondy Sorgatz Age 75 Truman February 22, 2011	Rondy Sorgatz was shot and killed by her husband, Carl Sorgatz. Family members were concerned and called police to check on Rondy and Carl. Police officers went to the Sorgatz residence on February 22nd and found the couple dead. The investigation has shown that Carl killed his wife with a gunshot and then killed himself.
Cynthia Hickman Age 34 Brooklyn Park February 26, 2011	Cynthia Hickman was beaten and killed. Her estranged husband, Henry Hickman, is charged with second-degree murder and attempted second-degree murder for setting fire and leaving their minor sons in the house. Cynthia had obtained an order for protection less than two weeks before she was murdered. When Cynthia sought the protective order, she testified that Henry had abused her for years and had been increasingly emotionally volatile since she talked of divorce. She testified to waking up next to her photograph with a knife over it and said he slapped, punched, and pushed her on different occasions. Evidence shows that on February 26 th , Henry beat Cynthia with a baseball bat. He then lit a mattress, threw it on top of her body and ran out of the home, leaving the bat on the lawn and his two sons, ages 8 and 5, in the basement where he told them to stay. The man who had been dating Cynthia received several phone calls from her number. When he answered, the caller identified himself as "Hank" and said that "she's done." The man then called 911. The police went to Cynthia's house, rescued the children from the burning house and found Cynthia's body. The prosecutor plans to go to the grand jury to ask that Henry Hickman be charged with first-degree murder.
Tabitha Lee Belmonte Age 16 Amor March 21, 2011	Tabitha Belmonte was shot and killed by her boyfriend, Dylan Cox. Dylan was found injured at the scene. He shot Tabitha multiple times and then shot himself. He died the next day from a self-inflicted gunshot wound. The shooting took place in the home of Cox's parents where Tabitha was living with Dylan and their seven-month-old daughter.

Dawn Anderson Age 45 Park Rapids March 22, 2011	Dawn Anderson was shot and killed by her estranged husband, Gregory Duane Anderson. Dawn had obtained an order for protection in November 2010, indicating in her petition that Gregory had an alcohol problem and was becoming increasingly erratic and out of control. On March 22nd, Dawn called 911 and said that her husband was threatening to kill her. In the background of the call, there was a loud noise and then the phone went dead. The couple's 20-year old son ran for help to a neighbor and they also called 911. Gregory had had his firearms taken away after a 2007 gun conviction and authorities are not sure how he obtained a rifle. Before the police arrived, Gregory shot himself after killing his wife.
Abigail M. Fedeli Age 20 Brooklyn Park April 8, 2011	Abigail Fedeli was shot and killed by her former boyfriend, Aaron Parson. Abigail was killed by a gunshot wound to the neck while she was in the break room at Festival Foods with Michael M. Habte, another employee at the store who had recently started dating Abigail. Aaron, also an employee at Festival Foods and someone who Abigail had previously dated, came into the break room and shot both Abigail and Michael. Abigail had broken up with Aaron about three months earlier. Abigail died at the scene and Michael died later during surgery. Aaron Parson fled the store. When officers approached him, he shot and killed himself.
Linda Kay Norman Age 51 Granada June 2, 2011	Linda Kay Norman was shot and killed by a former boyfriend, Curtis Lynn Larson. Curtis shot Linda in a minivan in a relatively secluded area of Imogene. The minivan was parked outside Our Place Bar. The authorities believe that the two had previously had an intimate relationship. Linda was shot in the head with a .22 caliber rifle by Larson and then he shot himself in the head with the same rifle. There were no witnesses to the shootings.
Kristen E. Sandeen Age 40 New Hope June 5, 2011	Kristen Sandeen was strangled and killed. About the Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women

The Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women was founded in 1978 to serve as a unifying voice for battered women and to link battered women's programs in the state with the common purpose of ending domestic violence.

MCBW is a statewide, member-based organization serving more than 84 local, regional, and statewide member organizations, and their additional 42 satellite offices, that advocate for an end to battering. The types of programs operated by MCBW members include battered women's shelters and safe homes, community advocacy programs, criminal justice intervention projects, state and national training and technical assistance organizations, human rights organizations, and homeless shelters and transitional housing programs. Members include 16 culturally specific and population specific programs serving differing communities.

MCBW promotes individual, institutional, and cultural social change and works to end oppression based on gender, race, age, sexual orientation, class, and disability. The key program areas of MCBW include: public policy advocacy; information and resources; public awareness; training and technical assistance; and networking.

MCBW's activities include resources and referrals for individuals, legislative and public policy advocacy on a statewide and federal level, sponsoring training events for programs that serve battered women, coordinating statewide task force meetings, serving as an information clearinghouse, maintaining a web site, and publishing public awareness and prevention initiatives.

Mission Statement:

The mission of the Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women is to provide a voice for battered women and member programs; challenge systems and institutions so they respond more effectively to the needs of battered women and their children; promote social change; and support, educate, and connect member programs.

Vision Statement:

The vision of the Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women is to end violence against women and their children and to achieve social justice for all.

The Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women publishes The Femicide Report, a report on women and children murdered in our state, to educate the public about the lethality of domestic violence and child abuse. We report on the murders of women and children at the hands of abusers to direct attention to the challenges faced by all of the women and children who are living with abuse and as a call to all Minnesotans to come together because it takes the entire community to end violence.

The 2011 Femicide Report is compiled from news accounts. Please contact MCBW if we have missed a death or if you have updated or more complete information on any femicide.

We ask that the Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women be credited when information from this report is used.
